

Emily Huang's Home Page: Documentation

Project description

This website is made to showcase a variety of skill sets and act as a point of contact for Emily Huang's work. It includes a main page that serves as an "About Me" section and a contact page for users to get in touch using email. It also contains a page called "Resume" or "Experimental" that experiments with GenAI and how it can be used to display a resume visually on a webpage.

User Personas

1. John is a 35-year-old art and tech recruiter who values convenience and novelty and needs to manage thousands of applications quickly.
2. Eliza is a 21-year-old game development student who is also a producer on a student game project. She values creativity.

User stories

1. John - John is looking to hire a junior-level 3D artist with programming knowledge for his team's latest game in development. He'll scan thousands of portfolios and resumes to the point that most will blur together. Since he has hundreds of applicants to look through, he's going to spend as little time on each applicant as possible.
2. Eliza is a game student looking for other students to collaborate on a game project. She is looking for relevant past projects that other students have worked on. She also plans on reaching out to a couple of people who look like they might fit on the project.

Design mockups

